Fifth Annual Meeting of Educational Association Held at Onancock.

PROGRAMME IS PRACTICAL

Harry St. G. Tucker and Prof. Fitzhugh, of University of Virginia, Among Speakers.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
ONANCOCK, VA., Dec. 1.—The fifth annual meeting of the Accomac Educational Association was held here on the 26th and 27th instant, with the result of an increase of interest on the part of the teachers. About one hundred teachers were present.

The programme was purposely made as practical as possible, and included not only interesting discussions of real problems, but such as will undoubtedly be the means of the solution of some of the problems. Papers were read on the grading of the rural school, and the question so discussed that a course of study by grades was adopted for the purpose of making the first step towards a uniform gradation for all of the schools in the county. This course is to be placed in the hands of every teacher, and is to be tested in its actual working, in the schools and under every condition.

Another important topic was the efficiency of the books now prescribed by law for use in the public schools. After an interesting and practical discussion, written votes were taken on each book in use as regards the salisfactoriness of the results obtained by the teachers in its use. These bailots were placed in the hands of a permanent committee, who its use. These ballots were placed in the hands of a permanent committee, who will make recommendations to the State Board of Education, both as regards the standing of the books from the point of utility and with a view to suggesting other books in the place of those that were voted unsatisfactory. The representatives of several of the leading publishing houses were present, and were accorded the privilege of the floor in the discussions.

On Thirsday evening a scholarly and helpful paper was read by Professor Jones, head of the department of education in the State Fomale Normal School at Farmville, emphasizing the industrial was active to the control of the contr at Farmville, emphasizing the was active side of education. Mr. Jones was active in becoming acquainted with the teachers, and many of them expressed in appreciation of his help and suggestion. appreciation of his help and suggestions. On the same evening a lecture was delivered by Dr. W. S. Currell, professor of literature in Washington and Lee University, on Education and the Higher Life, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience. Dr. Currell has in the two times that he has lectured on the Eastern Shore become a favorite not only with the teachers, but also among the people.

On Friday evening splendid addresses On Friday evening splendid addresses were delivered by Harry St. G. Tucker, agent of the Southern Education Board, and Professor Thomas Fitzhugh, of the chair of Latin in the University of Virginia. Mr. Tucker spoke on the necessity of supporting and fostering the public schools as the main hope for the industrial advancement of the State, dealing with local conditions in a telling manner, laying emphasis on the low salary of female teachers. Mr. Fitzhugh encouraged the fostering of a system of public schols that would more easily give to female teachers. Mr. Fitzhugh encouraged the fostering of a system of public schols that would more easily give to the Virginia youth the opportunities for high school and university education. The addresses by the visitors and the papers and discussions of the teachers themelves were distinctly uplifting, but perhaps nothing was of more practical good to them than the educational exhibit that was held. This consisted of the work of the pupils in almost all of the schools, and the teachers in session were divided into committees for the purpose of judging the work and awarding certificates of merit to those pupils who had sent in the best and second best in each kind of work. In this way, a stimulus was given to the pupils themselves, and an opportunity was afforded the teachers for examining into each other's methods and thus for the gaining of new ideas for their own work.

The officers of the association were Professor Edgar Sydenstricker, of the Onancock High School, president, and Mr. John D. Grant Jr., secretary. For the following year Professor A. L. Burger, of the Pungoteague District High School, and G. W. Gillespie, of the Chincoteague Graded School, were elected president and secretary. Under the energetic and careful supervision of County Superintendent Joynes, the schools have made great progress during the last few years. The consolidation of the smaller schools is being pushed forward, and public rentiment in favor of good schools is steadily growing.
